

H.V.A.C. Professional Opportunities

Are you tired of long hours, late nights and weekends, and all of the responsibility of owning your own business? Does making more money, working less hours, working inside instead of on a cold or hot roof, working during the day instead of at night or the weekend appeal to you? We have a management position in a growing successful company at Greeley Furnace with a fifty-year history of success. If you are truly an experienced professional of the HVAC industry, and would like the opportunity to assure a future in the industry that does not demand that you do it all on your own, you may be the individual we are seeking.

We at Greeley Furnace realize that professional employment opportunities in the H.V.A.C. industry (especially in northern Colorado) have been very few and far between with consolidation failing in this area. It has in effect fragmented the industry leaving very few successful local companies of any size or history, therefore eliminating any top paying lead field or management positions. The decline of work due to the housing construction slowdown and the normal cycles of business have caused record numbers of the small one or two man shops to close. But the future is bright due to the reformation of a few successful businesses. These businesses have survived to become financially established with enough size to support top paying positions. Greeley Furnace has reestablished growth in volume and offers a bright future for their current employees and for a few new employees that will fill the need for management. These positions hold great responsibility due to the lack of qualified help in the industry as a whole therefore an emphasis on training new technicians not hiring them will be required. The question remains as to where will the trainers and managers will come from? For us here in Colorado without any graduating home grown technicians coming into the industry, we only have two options: either we recruit from out of state and pay to relocate them to Colorado, or we offer opportunities to local professionals that may not have the salary or the future they desire in their current positions. We are seeking motivated, intelligent leaders with sufficient knowledge of our industry to help bring us to the next level. If you are in fact frustrated, possibly seeking an alternative to the nightmare of trying to scratch out a living in this desperate industry, we would like to talk with you about your abilities and requirements to see if the bright future that Greeley Furnace envisions might involve you.
